MESSAGE

I am happy to know that National Real Estate Development Council (NAREDCO) Delhi is bringing out a handbook on "Ambient Air Quality & Clean Construction Delhi".

Ambient Air Pollution is one of the gravest challenges faced by Delhi and the City's rapid development requires responsible environmental management and sustainable urban practices to safeguard air quality and public health. Implementing clean construction measures, such as preventive dust control, covered transport, effective housekeeping and proper waste management helps minimize environmental impacts throughout a project's lifecycle.

A systematic approach featuring regular air-quality monitoring, site inspections, trained personnel and prompt corrective action ensures accountability. Ultimately, strong collaboration among government agencies, developers and contractors is essential to translate these standards into consistent daily practice, fostering a cleaner and healthier city.

My best wishes for successful publication of the Handbook.
