MESSAGE

I am happy to know that Shri Ram College of Commerce has completed its Centenary. A hundred years of sustained institutional excellence is a remarkable milestone, deeply intertwined with the growth of Delhi and the evolving aspirations of a rising India.

My association with SRCC began as a student in Delhi during 1979-1982, and it was renewed in 2016 during an Indo-US programme. It was a privilege to return as Chief Guest for the 100th Annual Day, a fitting occasion to reflect on an institution whose influence now extends far beyond its campus.

As India's National Capital, Delhi has long been a confluence of ideas, enterprise and talent. SRCC mirrors this dynamism. Its students and alumni have made enduring contributions across business, public life, policy and academia, carrying the College's intellectual and professional ethos into national and global spheres.

Today's students step into a world shaped by rapid technological shifts and deep global interconnectedness. As India expands its global economic footprint and Delhi emerges as a dynamic world city, the future demands leaders who combine international competence with a strong sense of social responsibility.

My best wishes to the entire SRCC community as it enters its second century, with a continued commitment to purposeful leadership and global excellence

Taranjit S. Sandhu
